

c.v. Angelyn Dries, O.S.F.

Professor Emerita, as of 2012, Department of Theological Studies, Saint Louis University, where I held the Danforth Chair in the Humanities since 2003; Religious Studies Department at Cardinal Stritch University (1980-2003). Some recent publications include, “Catholic Mission in North America, 1910-2010,” in Stephen Bevens, ed., A Century of Catholic Mission. Roman Catholic Missiology 1910 to the Present (Oxford Centre for Mission Studies, 2013); “Religion and Missions,” in Stephen J. Stein, ed., Cambridge History of Religion in the Americas (2012); “Mission and Culture: An Historical Theologian’s Perspective on Twentieth Century U.S. Catholic Mission,” in Bevens, ed. Mission & Culture. The Louis J. Luzbetak Lectures (2012); “Women in Church, State and Society,” a chapter in Lamin Sanneh and Michael McClymond, eds. Blackwell Companion to World Christianity (forthcoming, 2014).

I collaborated with the Saint Louis Area Religious Archivists to produce A Resource Guide for the Study of Catholic Missions Overseas. The Resource enabled archivists to view their holdings with a new “lens” and introduced undergraduates to the use, context and value of primary sources in historical theology. “Catholic Theology in a Global Context. A World Church,” in J.J. Mueller, SJ, ed., Theological Foundations, Concepts and Methods for Understanding Christian Faith (2007, revision, 2011), was a Department effort to connect our research strengths for the benefit of our introductory undergraduate course.

Service to the Profession: Editorial Board, Studies in World Christianity Series (Oxford University Press), Contributing Editor to International Bulletin of Missionary Research, and Associate Editor of Missiology, An International Review (2002-2009).
